

The Long Island Dental Hygienists' Association Presents:
Understanding the Challenges and Rewards in Treating the Apprehensive, Unmanageable and Medically Compromised Patient

Dr. Marc Gottlieb

Dr. Gottlieb, a dental anesthesiologist, has dedicated himself to the care of the dental apprehensive; including phobic, special needs and medically compromised patients in all phases of dentistry. For almost 25 years, he has practiced privately in Levittown, NY. He has educated dental students as well as treated "the untreatable" patients at Long Island Jewish Medical Center and Stony Brook University respectively throughout his years as a dentist. Dr. Gottlieb will share long-learned insight and increase your understanding and success in treating the anxious patient.

- ▲ Identify patients with apprehension
- ▲ Have a better understanding of the phobic patient
- ▲ How and when to schedule treatment
- ▲ Dental hygiene treatment planning and history taking
- ▲ Medications and their interactions
- ▲ Learn to differentiate when a patient is treatable by conventional means or if they require nitrous oxide sedation or oral sedation
- ▲ New approaches to treating apprehensive patients such as hypnosis
- ▲ Medical Emergencies

Upon completion of this course you will have more confidence and understanding when dealing with obstacles related to your patients tolerance and ability for conventional dental treatment. You will be able to comprehend what can be accomplished in an office visit with an apprehensive patient and when referral may be necessary.
